lookingback movingforward

United Way of Long Island has helped thousands of people rise above their challenges and gain more opportunities for a better future through program innovation. We'd like to thank our donors, corporate, labor and community partners, along with our volunteers for making this possible. The issues we face on Long Island are too large and deeply-rooted for any single individual or agency to tackle alone, but we know that change is possible when we LIVE UNITED as a community. That's why United Way combines funding and expertise with highly-effective programs that focus on issues that will help those the most vulnerable, achieving the greatest community impact.

United Way of Long Island's network of care has assisted 325,000 individuals, or approximately 1 person out of 10 on Long Island. Thanks to the support of more than 20,000 individuals, 600 companies, organized labor, private, corporate and government funders we were able to invest $12.8 million among 100 community-based organizations as well as our signature programs. Together, we are transforming lives.

United Way will continue to work toward a community where all individuals and families advance the common good throughout Long Island. It starts with making sure people can meet their basic needs for food, housing and safety. It continues with helping people gain a quality education, a stable income and good health. These are the building blocks for a good life and the cornerstones of a strong community.

Thank you for all you do to make this possible.

Astrid of Patchogue, NY dreamed of becoming a nurse and helping others through her work, but was uncertain of how to make her dream a reality. After connecting with United Way of Long Island, Astrid was awarded the Camilla Belser Scholarship Award, allowing her to begin a threeyear nursing program at Suffolk County Community College. Now entering her fourth semester of the program, Astrid is well on her way to accomplishing goal. She recently penned a thank you note to express her gratitude toward United Way of Long

To United Way of Long Island

I am extremely thankful for all of your help and support throughout all this time since I began college. It has been an insightful, exciting, and unforgettable journey that wouldn't have been possible without your help. Choosing nursing as my career is becoming one of the most rewarding decisions of my life, and even through I still have a long way to go, I am eager to continue to do what I love, which is to help others.

Once again, thank you very much for allowing my dreams to start becoming a reality.

As told by U.S. Army veteran Alana:

My husband and I met when we were 16 years old and chose to enlist in the Army when we turned 18. I served for 8 years as military police, and he as an armored crewman for $3 \frac{1}{2}$ years. We have a 10-year-old son and an 8-year-old daughter together.

Upon our discharge, we found ourselves struggling and decided to move to Long Island for the support of our family and for better educational opportunities for our children. Unfortunately when we arrived we found ourselves without a stable support system or a place to live.

We were contacted by United Veterans Beacon House (UVBH), a partner of United Way of Long Island and were offered assistance that allowed our children to have some resemblance of a Christmas that year. I am a UVBH house manager of an emergency family shelter residence and my family was one of the first to move into new low-cost apartments for veterans. In May of 2016, my family was chosen to be the recipients of a car through United Way's Wheels for Warriors program. We now have a safe, trustworthy vehicle that I don't have to worry about breaking down if I'm driving with my children.

Transitioning home from military life is daunting. When I was serving, I knew no matter what I was going through there was someone who I could talk to who would understand – we were a family. I once again have that.

Anthony is on top of the world – literally as an iron worker stationed on the Verrazano Bridge, and figuratively with a happy and loving family – but it wasn't always this way.

He grew up in a single-parent home in Wyandanch, with an older sister and two younger brothers. Without positive role models in his life, he searched for an escape, but was led down the wrong path where he was later arrested and incarcerated. Upon his release, Anthony realized he needed to turn his life around. In an effort to build a better life for himself, as well as his soon-to-be-born daughter, he decided to take a positive step and enroll in United Way of Long Island's YouthBuild program.

With a new found sense of self and determination, Anthony completed the program in December of 2014, and graduated in June of 2015 when he earned his high school equivalency diploma. He later completed a pre-apprenticeship training program through Opportunities Long Island and was granted entry into a new career path as an iron worker apprentice for Local 361 Union Structural Iron Workers on the bridge.

"I am a man now, before I was a young boy looking out for only myself," he says. "YouthBuild helped me get out of my comfort zone and I am a better man, a better husband, a better father looking to help my community in the best way possible. I'm still growing and have things I need to work on, but I'd like to speak to the students and people who are struggling around me and tell them that nothing is handed to you."

salutingourveterans

On Veterans Day, United Way of Long Island salutes the men and women who have served our country. United Way of Long Island holds sacred the dedication and bravery of veterans and active military and in honor of our local heroes, November will be recognized as Mission United Month.

Mission United is a vital program offered to veterans and their families, as well as active military and reservists that focuses on employment services, education, financial well-being, housing and family support. The need for these services is particularly significant on Long Island as we have over 135,000 veterans living in our communities, of whom over 4,700 have entered the service since September 11, 2001. With such a large number of veterans, the coordination of critical services is of paramount importance.

Richelle, a wife and mother of three was struggling to pay her bills on time and keep the house warm during the frigid winter months. She and her husband had both fallen on hard times, severely impacting their income and ability to keep up with household expenses. Despite Richelle and her husband both working full-time jobs, the family was still having trouble making ends meet.

In an attempt to save money but stay warm, Richelle would alternate between boiling water on the stove, cooking in the oven or baking to try and heat the house. Ultimately, Richelle realized her family needed assistance if they were to make it through the season safely. Richelle reached out to United Way of Long Island and was helped with a Project Warmth grant, which provided her with the resources she needed to catch up on her bills and heat their house.

"Never in a million years did I think the rug would just be pulled out from underneath us," Richelle remarked. "Despite being a family with two parents who work full time, we were struggling. United Way of Long Island gave us a chance to use our funds to relieve other expenses and the peace of mind knowing we don't have to worry about freezing in our own home."

20 Years of Housing Innovation on Long Island

United Way of Long Island's Housing and Green Building Department is at the forefront of efficient and sustainable development in the region, building more than 85 homes in nearly 20 years. Working closely with community organizations and government agencies, United Way of Long Island manages housing projects from blueprints to groundbreaking, as well as detailed finishes and utilities – ensuring that every home is built to be healthy, easily maintained, and energy efficient.

Who We Help

Residents who live in these homes include those with special needs, veterans, and families struggling to find affordable housing. For both new construction and renovation projects, specific attention is directed toward utilizing materials that reduce

before renovation

home health and safety hazards. Not only do these homes help those who live there, they are built in part by students in the VetsBuild and YouthBuild programs, providing hands-on experience and training the green construction workforce of the future.

High Tech Training

after renovation

Students train at United Way's E3 SmartBuild Training Center, a 5,000 sq ft state-of-the-art facility equipped with the latest tools and technology to teach building science, energy efficiency, and green construction. This lab is at the epicenter of the Housing and Green Building Department, providing a home base for all aspects of the program including a training program for building professionals and the general public who are seeking information on how to enter this high-growth workforce.

Award Winning Affordable Homes

United Way of Long Island's reputation as experts in weatherization, energy efficiency and sustainability is not limited to the immediate area. Proving itself a leader in the movement of zero-energy ready homes nationwide, United Way of Long Island was named the Grand Winner in the Affordable Home category of the U.S. Department of Energy's Housing Innovation Awards two years in a row, the first time a builder from Long Island has been granted this award.

Building A Brighter Future

With five home builds currently underway, and more on the horizon, the need for attainable housing that can stand the test of time is clear. The work of the Housing and Green Building Department is building a better life for Long Islanders - one home at a time.
