Team Mission United

For the seventh consecutive year, United Way of Long Island was selected as a charity partner for the 2023 TCS New York City Marathon, which will take place on Sunday, November 5th. United Way's Team Mission United runners are raising $30,000 in support of U.S. military veterans and their families on Long Island. The runners came together for an appreciation dinner and to hear from Frank Amalfitano, President and CEO of United Veterans Beacon House, about how United Way's partnership helps provide housing and wrap around services. Since 2016, Team Mission United has raised more than $180,000. The TCS New York City Marathon covers all five boroughs of the city, while attracting over 50,000 participants and finishers. The commitment this team has shown as they raise funds to benefit Long Island's veterans is inspiring. A special thanks to Texas Roadhouse who generously hosted the event.

Thank you to all the runners for their support of Long Island veterans and a special thank you to our evening's host, Texas Roadhouse of Deer Park.

Stuff-A-Bus

The Success of Our Students... Starts With YOU!

United Way of Long Island's 2023 "Stuff-A-Bus" program provided over 5,000 backpacks filled with school supplies for kindergarten through 5th grade students across Nassau and Suffolk Counties.

Corporate partners and community members dropped off donated school supplies at United Way's Entenmann's Family Center for Hope in Deer Park, NY. Volunteers came together to pack the supplies and load school buses so that no child would start the school year without the basics.

According to Neisah, a sixth grader who helped unpack much-needed supplies at her school, "It feels amazing to help out all these students. It feels great and our community, our school, is all about kindness."

Robert McCarthy, Principal of Loretta Park Elementary School in Brentwood, NY, said, "We are lucky to have United Way of Long Island and Suffolk Transportation Services donate Stuff-A-Bus products to children who don't have the opportunity to get supplies, and families that are struggling, and they truly benefit each year."

Fifteen years ago, United Way of Long Island and Suffolk Transportation Services, Inc., launched the Stuff-A-Bus partnership. The program has provided over 1 million back-to-school supplies to children in need.

"We are proud to give back to the students who need it the most, make sure no one feels left behind, and help begin their new school year on a fresh start," said John Corrado, Assistant Vice President, Suffolk Transportation Services, Inc.

Theresa A. Regnante, United Way of Long Island President and CEO, added, "It's our pleasure to thank Suffolk Transportation Services for all the good our Stuff-A-Bus partnership continues to do. We look forward to building on this annual tradition that helps ensure Long Island children have the tools they need to be successful throughout the school year."

United Way of Long Island extends gratitude and heartfelt thanks to our corporate partners, community members, and volunteers.

Hundreds of Long Island students in need were given a busload of school supplies thanks to a donation from the United Way's annual "Stuff-a-Bus" back-to-school drive.

The nonprofit partnered with Suffolk Transportation and Zebra Technologies to make the delivery of pencils, crayons, notebooks, and glue to Cordello Elementary School in Central Islip. Student volunteers formed an assembly line to help bring the items inside.

Neisah Louis Charles, a sixth grader at the school, said it aligns with the mission statement of the school district.

"It feels amazing to help out all these students. It feels great and our community, our school here Cordello is all about kindness," said Charles.

United Way of Long Island invierte en el éxito de los estudiantes

Noticia

El programa "Stuff-A-Bus" 2023, de United Way of Long Island y Suffolk Transportation Services, Inc., recientemente hizo entrega de útiles escolares muy necesarios a la Loretta Park Elementary School, en Brentwood, Nueva York. Foto: Unitedwayli.org

El programa "Stuff-A-Bus" 2023 de la organización comunitaria United Way of Long Island proporcionó más de 5,000 mochilas llenas de útiles escolares para estudiantes desde el Jardín de infantes a 5to. grado en los condados de Nassau y Suffolk.

Los socios corporativos y los miembros de la comunidad entregaron suministros donados en el Entenmann's Family Center for Hope de United Way, ubicado en Deer Park, Nueva York. Los voluntarios se reunieron para empacar los útiles y cargar los autobuses escolares para que ningún niño comenzara el año escolar sin lo básico.

Según Neisah, una estudiante de 6to. grado que ayudó a desempacar útiles muy necesarios en su escuela, «Es maravilloso ayudar a todos estos estudiantes. Se siente genial y nuestra comunidad, nuestra escuela, se trata de bondad», remarcó.

La educación es esencial para desbloquear el potencial de un estudiante y lograr el éxito financiero. Para muchas familias de Long Island, el costo de comprar útiles escolares puede ser una carga importante. Al proporcionar mochilas y útiles, United Way prepara a los estudiantes para el éxito académico y, al mismo tiempo, aumenta las oportunidades económicas de sus familias.

Robert McCarthy, director de la Escuela Primaria Loretta Park en Brentwood, Nueva York, comentó al respecto: «Tenemos suerte de que United Way of Long Island y Suffolk Transportation Services donen productos Stuff-A-Bus a niños que no tienen la oportunidad de obtener suministros y familias que están pasando apuros, y realmente se benefician cada año».

Hace quince años, United Way de Long Island y Suffolk Transportation Services, Inc. lanzaron la asociación Stuff-A-Bus. Este programa ha proporcionado más de 1 millón de útiles escolares para niños necesitados.

«Estamos orgullosos de retribuir a los estudiantes que más lo necesitan, asegurarnos de que nadie se sienta abandonado y ayudar a comenzar su nuevo año escolar con un gran inicio», expresó John Corrado, vicepresidente adjunto de Suffolk Transportation Services, Inc.

Por su parte, Theresa A. Regnante, presidenta y directora ejecutiva de United Way of Long Island, agregó: «Es un placer para nosotros agradecer a Suffolk Transportation Services por todo el bien que nuestra asociación Stuff-A-Bus continúa haciendo. Esperamos aprovechar esta tradición anual que ayuda a garantizar que los niños de Long Island tengan las herramientas que necesitan para tener éxito durante todo el año escolar».

Asimismo, United Way of Long Island extiende su gratitud y agradecimiento de todo corazón a sus socios corporativos, miembros de la comunidad y voluntarios.

Long Island needs a better, more realistic poverty measure

Sometimes, numbers don't tell the whole story. At times, they even tell the wrong story.

Take Long Island's poverty rate, which in 2022 stood at 5.9%, according to the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey. That's compared with New York State's poverty rate of 14.3%. The nation's poverty rate, which is calculated differently, remained at 11.5%.

At first glance, the Island's poverty rate seems to paint a positive picture of a region economically healthier and wealthier than the rest of the state and country. But the region's rate is based on an excruciatingly low income level — $29,678 for a family with two adults and two children. Any family earning anything above that isn't considered in the poverty calculation.

That makes the federal poverty standard, which began when President Lyndon Johnson initiated the War on Poverty, an increasingly useless calculation. It most certainly doesn't tell the whole story — or the right one — in a high cost-of-living region like the Island. While the index does not include governmental benefits aimed at reducing poverty, it also fails to provide a fuller picture of the burdens of being poor, including lack of opportunity, inadequate housing, and insufficient medical care.

The United Way of Long Island produces a valuable report called ALICE, standing for Asset Limited, Income Constrained, Employed. The updated 2023 ALICE report measures what it calls a "household survival budget." That budget for two adults and two school-age children stands at $79,668 in Suffolk and $76,932 in Nassau — a far better gauge of what it takes to manage a family on the Island. The United Way cites housing, food, child care and transportation as key "basic needs" and determined that 29.4% of households on the Island — 118,911 in Nassau, 166,268 in Suffolk — struggle to afford them.

That data provides a more accurate, complete narrative, better reflecting Long Island's reality. But until the federal government changes its calculations, families who fall within the broader ALICE threshold, but above the official poverty rate, must go without benefits they would otherwise receive.

All of this matters. The Island's official poverty guidelines are used to calculate a variety of benefits, including Medicaid and the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or SNAP. They're used for federal student loans, children's health insurance, and home energy assistance. And more broadly, they've been used for community development block grants, free school lunch efforts, employment programs, and legal services grants. If the poverty guidelines were more realistic and appropriate, more families and neighborhoods within the region would qualify for necessary benefits and services.

State and federal officials must develop better measurements that align with the region's economic needs. But adjusting the numbers won't solve Long Island's bigger poverty problem, as the ALICE data shows just how much housing, energy, transportation and food costs continue to weigh on so many residents.
